Warm messages

For regulars, long-time clients and anyone you know by name.

W1 The plain, honest thank-you — Email · Warm

Subject: Thank you, [First name]

Hi [First name],

Before things go quiet for the break, I wanted to say thanks. You [booked us in / came back / sent a friend our way] this year, and that's a big part of why [Business] is still here doing work we enjoy.

We close on [Thursday 24 December] and we're back on [Monday 4 January]. If something urgent comes up in between, [call or text 04XX XXX XXX / reply to this email and we'll check in on the 29th].

Have a good Christmas, and I hope you get some proper time off.

BEFORE YOU SEND

Spam Act basics, in plain English

Before you send

Two minutes that saves an awkward follow-up email.

How to send to your list legally (Australia)

Email and SMS messages sent in Australia are covered by the Spam Act 2003, enforced by the ACMA. A message is "commercial" if one of its purposes is to promote your goods or services. In practice, a festive email with a booking link, an offer, a voucher or "book now for January" is commercial. Our suggestion: treat every bulk email or SMS from your business as commercial and follow all three rules every time.

1. Consent. Only send to people who agreed to hear from you (they ticked a box or asked to be added), or existing customers who would reasonably expect to hear from you because of a current relationship (inferred consent). Never use bought, scraped or swapped lists, or email addresses copied from business cards or websites without checking they're allowed.
2. Identify. Include your business name (adding your ABN helps) and a way to contact you, such as an email address or phone number. The details must stay valid for at least 30 days after you send. Your email platform's footer usually covers this.
3. Unsubscribe. Give an easy, free way to opt out (an unsubscribe link, or "Reply STOP" for SMS) and act on it within 5 working days. Don't email or text people who've already opted out, even for Christmas.

Also worth knowing

- Social media posts on your own pages aren't sent to an electronic address, so the Spam Act doesn't apply to them in the same way, but the Australian Consumer Law still does: don't make misleading claims, and honour any offer you post.
- Gift vouchers sold in Australia generally must be valid for at least 3 years (with limited exceptions), so the gift voucher post (SO5) says this.
- The Spam Act has no minimum number: even one email or text that promotes something needs consent, your business details and an unsubscribe. A one-to-one message that only thanks a client or confirms a job (no offer, booking link or review request) isn't a commercial message. Handwritten cards and posted letters aren't covered by the Spam Act.
- Health practitioners: check the Ahpra advertising guidelines before adding any offer or incentive.

Sources: acma.gov.au (Spam Act: consent, identify, unsubscribe); accc.gov.au (gift cards and vouchers); ahpra.gov.au (advertising a regulated health service). Checked November 2026. This is general information, not legal advice.

Send checklist

- [ ] Closure and reopening dates are correct. Christmas Day 2026 is a Friday. Boxing Day falls on Saturday 26 December, and Monday 28 December is an extra public holiday in every state and territory (in Tasmania it's the Boxing Day holiday; in SA both days are for Proclamation Day). New Year's Day is Friday 1 January 2027. Check your state.
- [ ] Every [placeholder] has been replaced. Search the document for "[" before sending.
- [ ] Merge fields work. Send a test to yourself first and check the first name came through.
- [ ] You're using Bcc or an email platform, never a long list in the To or Cc field (that exposes everyone's email address).
- [ ] Names are spelled correctly, especially on cards.
- [ ] If the message promotes anything, it has your business name, how to contact you and a working unsubscribe.
